Accreditation
The Office of Continuing Medical Education, David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The Office of Continuing Medical Education, David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA designates this live activity for a maximum of 6 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

The California State Board of Registered Nursing accepts courses approved by the AMA for category 1 credit as meeting the continuing education requirements for license renewal. Nurses from states other than California should inquire with their local State Board for specific continuing education policies.

Disclosure Statement
The FDA has issued a concept paper which classifies commercial support of scientific and educational programs as promotional unless it can be affirmed that the program is “truly independent” and free of commercial influence. In addition to independence, the FDA requires that nonpromotional, commercially supported education be objective, balanced, and scientifically rigorous. The policy further states that all potential conflicts of interest of the CME staff and faculty be fully disclosed to the program’s participants. In addition, Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education policy mandates that the provider adequately manages all identified potential conflicts of interest prior to the program. We at UCLA fully endorse the letter and spirit of these concepts.

Course Description

This full-day annual symposium is designed for all those interested in learning about the latest breakthroughs in clinical care, research and treatment in autism spectrum disorder (ASD), including health care providers, teachers, autism service providers, and families. Nationally renowned UCLA Center for Autism Research and Treatment (CART) faculty will present the most up-to-date information about ASD across the lifespan. The presentations will include updates in the latest scientific and clinical findings in genetics, neuroimaging, psychopharmacology, neurobiology, neurology, behavioral health, and overall clinical practice for ASD. Opportunities to ask questions will be provided through the program. This continuing education symposium is designed to equip community practitioners to apply the most effective, evidence-based practices for assessment, management and treatment of individuals with ASD.

Course Objectives

At the completion of this course, participants should be able to:

• Describe contributions of genetic factors to ASD and what they mean for diagnosis and treatment

• Understand implications of studies of early behavior and brain development in infants at risk for ASD

• Advise families on supporting youth through the transition to adulthood

• Inform providers and caregivers about psychiatric comorbidities associated with ASD, both with regard to diagnosis and treatment

• Become familiar with research and clinical considerations in ASD across a lifespan, from infancy to school age and adulthood

Target Audience

This full-day annual symposium is designed for all those interested in learning about the latest breakthroughs in research and treatment in autism spectrum disorder (ASD), including health care providers, teachers, autism service providers, and families.
